Meeting and Exceeding Expectations – what makes your meeting a not-to-be-missed event?

Are your board meetings inspiring, productive, and efficient? Or are your board meetings tedious, unproductive, and dominated by one or two people? Do they leave board members wondering why they volunteered in the first place?

Meeting and Exceeding Expectations will discuss how to conduct meetings to engage board members so they can better provide the valuable input that will propel your organization to greatness. We will suggest ways in which boards can pose critical questions, provide easy-to-implement answers, suggest tools, and clarify legal and ethical expectations – all while inserting some fun into your meetings.

You will find

- solutions to common board problems, such as poor chair performance, absentee board members, and conflicts of interest.
- tips to help you solve typical board dilemmas and promote generative discussions.
- suggestions to help your board members become more innovative and seek new solutions to old problems.

Participants will be provided with samples of effective meeting agendas, meeting evaluations, and other tools to use in improving the effectiveness of your board's meetings. Meeting and Exceeding Expectations is designed for chief executives, board members, senior staff, and any other participants involved in meetings of the board (as well as advisory committees and other groups).
